ABSTRACT

This guide to searching government documents provides a subject list, including LC call numbers, of 15 government publications indexes in the Dartmouth College Library and an explanation of U.S. government documents organization and coding. Detailed descriptions of each of the 15 indexes include sample entries with labels identifying the codes and numbers used. Two indexes described in detail are the Congressional Information Service/Index, for which examples show use of the index to locate abstracts of congressional publications, and the American Statistics Index. A sample search of the latter explains the steps involved in locating statistical information, with 20 suggestions for searching. Sample entries by race, sex, and state illustrate the types of detailed statistical data provided by the index. (SW)

INTRODUCTION

A government document is a publication issued at government expense or published by authority of a governmental body. It is any publication in book, serial or non-book form (pamphlets, leaflets, microfiche, etc.) bearing the imprint of the United States government. Government documents at Dartmouth College are for the most part housed in Baker Library. However, many government documents, due to the nature of their subject matter, are housed in the branch libraries. For instance, many publications of the National Institutes of Health are housed in Dana Library. Numerous research reports of the National Technical Information Service (NTIS) are located in Feldberg, Kresge, and Dana Libraries in addition to Baker Library. As one will notice when looking up the location of the serial publications of the U.S. government, these items are located throughout the Dartmouth College Libraries.

The Library of Dartmouth College is a selective depository of government documents. As such, we receive all the publications of the federal government that we choose. Currently, we take in over 85% of the publications of the United States government, made available to Federal Depository Libraries.

Before 1978, the majority of government documents were catalogued using the Library of Congress classification scheme, listed in the card catalog, and placed in the main stacks or a branch library.

If the publication is a serial, it will be included on the microfiche catalog of serials. A serial is any publication, issued in successive parts, appearing at intervals, usually regular ones, that is intended to be continued indefinitely. This term includes periodicals, annuals, newspapers, numbered series, and the proceedings and transactions of societies.

In 1978, the decision was made to locate all the non-serial government documents published after this date on the government documents mezzanine located above the serials reading room. A number of ephemeral publications, such as brochures, folders, and pamphlets, issued before 1978, are also shelved on the mezzanine. These documents are arranged by their Superintendent of Documents (SuDoc) number which is the number assigned by the GPO Library to identify the published document.

S1.106:L1415	State Department Publications
EP1.73/2:SU7	Environmental Protection Agency Publications

The documents mezzanine also contains Congressional hearings from the previous two and the current Congresses (a period of five years), many Congressional Committee Prints from the 78th Congress to the present, as well as recent Congressional reports and documents.

Some of the other valuable items located on the government documents mezzanine are:

CONGRESSIONAL INFORMATION SERVICE (CIS)

PURPOSE

This organization provides an indexing and abstracting service for publications issued by the United States Congress. Each CIS/Index is composed of two sections. The Index section, a guide to the contents of the documents, contains subject, title, bill number, report number, document number, and committee and subcommittee chairmen indexes, with each citation assigned an individual accession number. The companion Abstracts section contains abstracts which summarize the contents of each individual publication, organized by the CIS-assigned accession number.. Both Index and Abstracts are issued monthly with quarterly and annual cumulations. Each annual publication cumulates the over 13,500 or more abstracts and the more than 100,000 index references that are included in the monthly issues throughout the year. The CIS/Index is located on the shelves beneath the windows of the serials lobby.

HEARINGS

The CIS/Indexes cover many diverse types of Congressional publications. After a bill, which is a draft of a proposed law, is introduced in Congress, it is referred to the committee having jurisdiction over that area of legislation. In most instances, the committee will conduct public hearings in order to collect opinions and information regarding the legislation under discussion. Sometimes, a committee will hold hearings even if no legislation has been introduced in order to gather more information on that subject. The witnesses at committee hearings include experts on the subject under discussion. The hearings publications contain full transcripts of the proceedings and thus are a most valuable source of information. On the government documents mezzanine, we have hearings from the 94th Congress to the present in printed format.

PRINTS

In order to keep up with their respective subject areas, the research staff of each committee and the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress make a considerable effort to keep informed regarding problems and developments in these areas. The information that develops from these research activities is often published as separate documents known as committee prints. The prints are excellent sources for situation reports, historical or statistical information and legislative analysis. On the government documents mezzanine, we have selected committee prints from the 78th Congress (1943) to the present. In the past a number of committee prints have been catalogued and may be found in the card catalog under author, title or subject. Thus, before the 94th Congress, Congressional committee prints can be found in two locations: in the stacks or on the government documents mezzanine.

REPORTS

The Congressional committees report and make recommendations to the Senate or House as a whole concerning the findings of their deliberations and hearings on legislation. These publications are known as House and Senate reports. Most reports make recommendations for passage of a specific piece of legislation. If a bill is simple and non-controversial, the report can be very brief, including only the committee's recommendation for passage. Many times, however, the report contains a detailed analysis of each section of the legislation in question, with a careful analysis of the committee's reasoning on every significant point. A valuable feature, often contained in these reports, is a separate summary of issues brought out in the hearings or a history of the problem with which the legislation is concerned. Often, minority or supplemental views of individual committee members are presented in much the same way as dissenting opinions on the U.S. Supreme Court. Many committees also issue annual or biennial summary reports reviewing their legislative, oversight, investigatory and related activities. These individual paper reports are kept in file cabinets in the right hand corner of the government documents mezzanine until the Congressional serial set (compilation of reports and documents in hard cover) arrives.

DOCUMENTS

The hearings, prints, and reports are the result of committee activity. However, there are other classes of Congressional documents which may be issued under the aegis of the full House or Senate. A major component of these are House documents, Senate documents, and executive documents. A Presidential message outlining the need for a piece of proposed legislation, for example, will usually be published as a House document. A Senate executive document is issued when the President asks the Senate to ratify a treaty or convention. Another document, called an executive report, contains a committee's recommendations regarding the ratification of a treaty or a nomination. Also a committee will sometimes receive permission to publish, as a House or Senate document, an item that would otherwise have been published as a committee print. These House and Senate documents are kept in file cabinets on the government documents mezzanine until the Library receives the bound volume of the serial set.

BILLS

Current bills and resolutions are received in microfiche and can be found in the Jones Microtext Center. A Finding Aid which provides access to these materials is available in the Center and the Documents Office.

USING THE CIS INDEX

In order to use the Congressional Information Service, the researcher should use the index section first. Through the index of subjects and names, one can find access to subjects of hearings and documents of individual testimony and of inserted and appendix materials; names and affiliations of witnesses, of corporate author (which is a corporate body such as a government or government department, a society, or institution which authorizes the publication of documents; these documents are then listed with the corporate body as the author) or individual authors, and of subcommittees holding hearings or issuing publications; and the official and popular names of bills and public laws. Each item that is indexed contains a brief notation that informs the reader of its contents. The index is characterized by extensive cross-referencing that refers the researcher to related subject terms.

If the reader would like more specific access to Congressional publications, he may use the other five indexes in the work. These are the index of titles, of bill numbers, of report numbers, of document numbers, and of committee and subcommittee chairmen. Each entry item contains an accession number which refers the searcher to the appropriate abstract in the Abstracts section of CIS.

Other search strategies may be employed by the user in addition to the indexes. Since the abstract volumes are organized by committee, materials of interest may occasionally be located by simply browsing through the abstracts under the committee or committees that deal with the subject.

LOCATION OF CONGRESSIONAL PUBLICATIONS

1. MICROTEXT

Having found the abstract, the user notes the accession number of the abstract along with the year of the CIS volume which he is using. He or she then proceeds to the Jones Microtext Center where an assistant will retrieve the document in question. The Library has all the holdings, both depository and non-depository, of the materials within CIS in microfiche.

2. ORIGINAL PAPER

If the patron prefers to use the actual document itself, he or she then would copy down the Superintendent of Documents (SuDocs) classification number. We only maintain the hearings in paper for the last six years on the documents mezzanine. Older ones may be found in the Microtext Center.

CUMULATIVE INDEX OF CONGRESSIONAL HEARINGS

The basic index of this set is entitled Index of Congressional Committee Hearings Prior to January 3, 1935. It, along with its supplements, provides an index to all the printed House and Senate hearings, not confidential in nature, that make up the collection of the U.S. Senate Library available in the Microtext Center. A Cumulative Index of Congressional Committee Hearings for the 74th through the 85th Congress (1935-1959) was issued in 1959. Thereafter, quadrennial supplements have been published.

Quadrennial Supplement to Cumulative Index of Congressional Committee Hearings for the 86th and 87th Congresses.

Second Quadrennial Supplement (88th and 89th Congresses).

Third Quadrennial Supplement (90th and 91st Congresses).

Fourth Quadrennial Supplement (92nd and 93rd Congresses).

Fifth Supplement (94th Congress).

With the publication of the Fifth Supplement, the Senate Library plans to publish the index on a two-year basis rather than issue the Quadrennial Supplement. This index follows the same basic arrangement as the initial cumulative index and its supplements; the hearing are listed by subject matter, by committee and by bill number (where applicable). The volume and tab numbers are assigned by the Senate Library.

This set allows the user access to the Congressional hearings that appeared before 1970. From 1970 on, one can gain access to these hearings through the CIS Index and Abstract volumes. For Congresses before 1970 one must use the Index of Congressional Hearings to gain access to the hearings which are kept on microfiche. One must note the house of Congress, the session of Congress and the volume number of the hearing. The tab number is useful since a volume number may contain multiple documents. Each tab number represents an individual document.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOG OF GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS 1789-1881

The Descriptive Catalog of Government Publications allows the researcher access to the books, pamphlets and documents published or purchased by the federal government since its inception in 1789 until 1881. It is arranged according to the publications' dates of issue. However, it does omit some departmental publications. It is located at the entrance of the serials room on the shelves to the right next to the Monthly Catalog.

COMPREHENSIVE INDEX TO THE PUBLICATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT 1881-1893

This two-volume work attempts to index the documents published by the federal government from 1881 to 1893. The arrangement is alphabetical by subject with a personal name index at the end of Volume 2. This work includes the time period covered by the 47th to 52nd Congresses. It is located on the same section of shelves as the Monthly Catalog.

CATALOGUE OF THE PUBLIC DOCUMENTS OF THE... CONGRESS AND OF ALL DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE PERIOD FROM MARCH 4, 1893 - DECEMBER 31, 1940

This multi-volume work represents the first systematic effort to list public documents issued by the federal government. It is an analytic dictionary catalog which arranges all its entries, whether author, subject or title in a single alphabet. Beginning with the 56th Congress, the serial number was included in brackets to allow the user easy access to the bound volumes of the Serial Set. As the Monthly Catalog improved its coverage, it began to duplicate the material in this work. Therefore the Catalogue of Public Documents ceased publication after the 1940 edition. It is located next to the Monthly Catalog in the Serials Reading Room.

DOCUMENT INDEX 1897-1933

This work provides the user with an alphabetical list of Congressional documents and reports only. Since every document that is contained within this work is also listed in the Catalogue of Public Documents, one does not need to use this work unless he or she has only the number of the document or report. It was published from 1897 until 1933 when it was superseded by the Numerical Lists and Schedules of Volumes. This work refers the reader to the volume number of the U.S. Congressional Series or Serial Set in which the particular document or report may be found.

NUMERICAL LISTS AND SCHEDULES OF VOLUMES 54TH CONGRESS, 1895 –

This publication provides the user with a numerical listing of the reports and documents of the House and Senate. It also includes a grouping of numbered reports and documents by volumes (the Schedules) of the Congressional set. These lists and schedules are classed and designated by Congress and Session. Thus this book is the main index by Session to the Serial Set which contains the House and Senate reports and documents. Since the Numerical Lists have no subject approach, one must find the report or document number from other indexing sources as the Monthly Catalog and CIS. One looks up the report or document number in the Numerical Lists and Schedules of Volumes. It provides the user with the title of the report or document and the individual volume of the bound serial set in which it is contained.

U.S. SERIAL SET

The U.S. Serial Set is a continuous collection of U.S. government publications compiled under the order of the Congress. These publications contain a great deal of information on a wide range of subjects. Congressional publications in the Serial Set include the committee reports, journals, manuals, and administrative reports of both Houses. The Serial Set encompasses a wide range of executive branch publications including messages of the President of the United States, the annual administrative reports of departments and agencies, and a number of series publications. Included within this set are reports from non-governmental organizations such as the Boy Scouts of America and the Daughters of the American Revolution, that are organized under laws that require such reports.

Dartmouth is fortunate in that it owns the entire U.S. Serial Set. In addition to the Descriptive Catalog of Government Publications 1789-1881, the Comprehensive Index to Publications of the U.S. Government, 1881-1893, The Catalogue of the Public Documents... 1893-1940, the Document Index 1897-1933, The Numerical Lists and Schedules of Volumes, The Monthly Catalog, and the CIS Index to Publications of the U.S. Congress which provides the user with access to the documents and reports contained within the U.S. Serial Set, Dartmouth subscribes to the CIS/U.S. Serial Set Index.

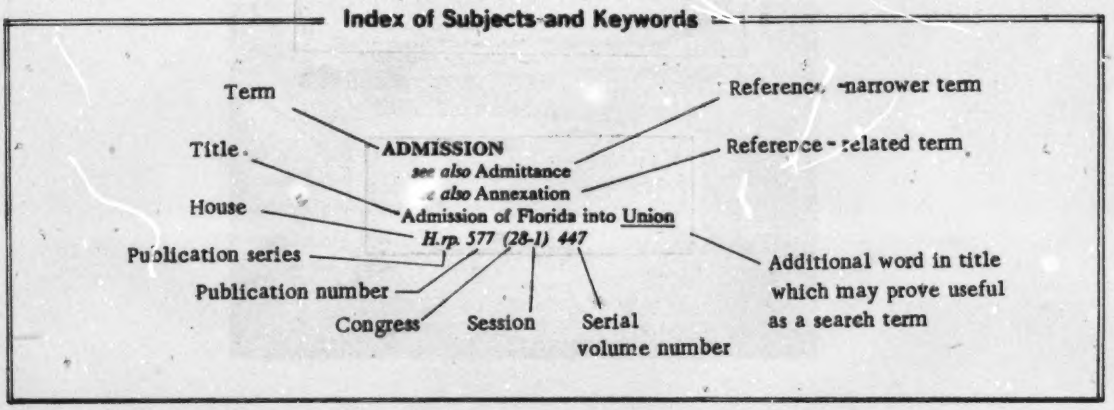
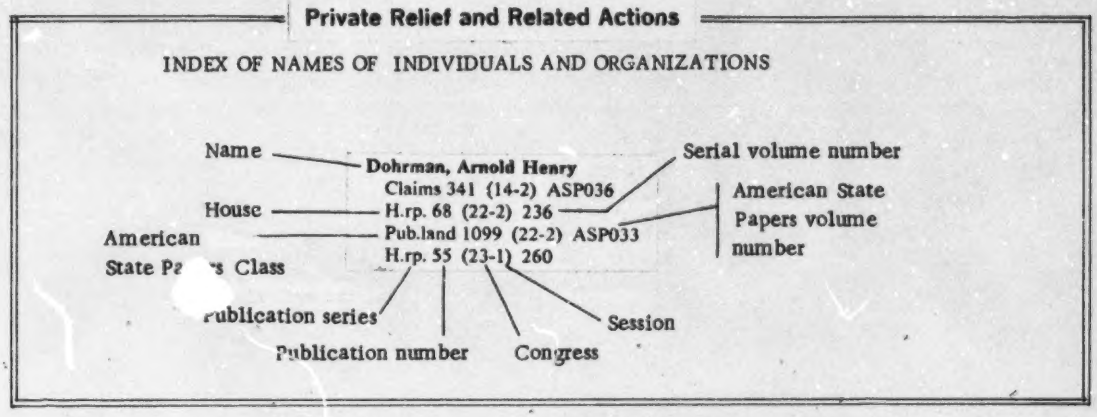
CIS/US SERIAL SET INDEX

The index allows the user retrospective access to the U.S. Serial Set. It is produced in twelve parts and covers the period from 1789-1903, Each part consists of three volumes. The index of subjects and keywords encompasses two of the volumes in each part. Throughout this index, cross references to items related to the subject under investigation are included. In addition to searching all the "see also" references, the patron should look at words in the titles of documents discovered under one term in order to find other possible index terms for searching. When looking for materials in specific subjects, one should check related more general index terms.



The third volume in each part is called the Finding Lists. Entitled - Private Relief and Related Actions - Index of Names of Individuals and Organizations, it provides access to documents concerned with the relief and related actions of Congress that affect specific individuals in specific circumstances. Through this volume, one has access to reports on specific legislation. The index lists alphabetically the proper names of persons and organizations cited in publications titles as recipients of proposed relief or related actions. Below each name, the publication series number, Congress and session, and serial volume number are provided.



Full titles of the document are available through reference to the Numerical List of Reports and Documents. Due to the difficulty in distinguishing between private and public documents, it is also advisable to check the subject volumes when searching for a particular name of a person or organization.

The Numerical List of Reports and Documents presents in publication number order, the titles and reference numbers for all reports and documents and the American State Papers which is a compilation of documents for which the assigned publication numbers are already known. Serially numbered material is arranged by Congress and session. For each document then, the publication number is given, followed by the title used, the sessional volume number and the serial number. The documents in the American State Papers are listed in numerical order by subject class. The session and Congress in which each document originated is given in parentheses at the end of the title.

CHECKLIST OF UNITED STATES PUBLIC DOCUMENTS 1789-1909

It is an approximately complete checklist of all public documents issued by the United States government during this time period. It is divided into three parts. The American State Papers for the first 14 congresses arranged by zero numbers from 01 to 038 appear at the beginning of the work. These are followed by the series of Congressional documents and reports, 15th - 60th Congress, arranged by serial numbers from 1 - 5561. This list allows one, knowing the document number of a publication of a particular Congress, to find the specific volume of the serial set in which this document is located. The third section contains the departmental publications of the U.S. government arranged by government authors and Superintendent of Documents class number. This work is located in the serials room to the left of the Monthly Catalog.

AMERICAN STATISTICS INDEX

PURPOSE

It's purpose is to be a master index and guide to all the statistical publications of the United States government which is, in this field, the world's most important and prolific publisher. It attempts to provide a "single source in which one could locate all the data currently collected by the Federal government on a particular subject." In a recent year, ASI collected, abstracted, and micro-published more than 7,000 titles, including approximately 800 periodicals.

This work produces monthly coverage of federal statistical publications that are published throughout the year. Articles in periodicals (Survey of Current Business, Monthly Labor Review)that contain statistical data are abstracted and indexed individually each month with quarterly supplements. The annual Supplement provides cumulated coverage of all publications that had previouly been indexed and abstracted in that year's Monthly Supplements. Every ASI edition is issued in two sections. The Index section contains comprehensive subject and name, category, title, and report number indexes with each reference assigned an individual abstract accession number. The Abstracts section includes a full description of the content and format of each publication organized by ASI accession number.

CONDUCTING THE SEARCH

When seeking a specific piece of information in ASI, the user should first look in the index under the most obvious subject terms to find citations on that topic. After finding the one or ones most relevant to the search, the user should look up their accession number in the abstracts section. This will provide one with a complete description of the publication and its availability.

Sample ASI Search

"How much advertising do Chicago TV stations sell?"

Step 1

Check the ASI Index volume

Start with a "subject" approach, where extensive cross-references will lead to the proper index reference from almost any likely point of entry.

An alternate approach is through the "Index by Categories." Since you are looking for information about a particular City, you can find it under "By City."

Step 2

Go from the index to the data description in the appropriate Abstracts volume

The ASI accession number in the index will lead you to a publication entry that fully describes the document and pinpoints the tables containing the statistics you need.

The ASI abstract contains the bibliographic information you need to locate the publication in a library's hardcopy collection or to obtain it from the issuing source, if copies are available.

Alternatively, if you have access to an ASI/Microfiche Library collection, the ASI accession number will lead you directly to the correct microfiche. Or, individual publications abstracted in any ASI Monthly or Annual Supplement are available for purchase on microfiche directly from Congressional Information Service through our CIS & ASI Documents on Demand service.

Order kits supplied to all ASI subscribers provide the necessary information about costs and how to place microfiche orders. (Details are also available by writing CIS, Customer Service Rep., P.O. Box 30056, Washington, D.C. 20014.

Suggestions for Making Information Searches

The "best" information search techniques to use with ASI abstracts and indexes depends upon the type of information needed and upon the amount and type of information with which the search begins. Listed below are some examples of the types of information you can obtain through ASI, together with suggested routes for searching.

IN ORDER TO . . .	YOU SHOULD . . .
Pinpoint specific statistical data on any subject treated in Federal Government publications.	Use the subject index.
Locate broad analyses of comprehensive studies.	Use the subject index; concentrate on the more general subject terms.
Determine whether data are available for specific parts of the U.S., such as States, cities, or counties; for specific industries or commodities; or for specific groups of people, such as races, men and women, or age, income, or occupational groups.	Use both the subject and category indexes.
Find comparative data for States, cities, foreign countries, Government agencies, commodities, industries, or groups of people.	Use the category index.
Find out what Federal Reserve district Florida is in.	Look in the Guide to Selected Standard Classifications.
Determine whether a large report, with a breakdown by industry, will include data on the dog food industry.	Look at the Standard Industrial Classification Codes listed in the Guide to Selected Standard Classifications to determine that the industry you are looking for has a 4-digit code. Look in the indexes for notations of content specifying detailed industry breakdowns. Look at the table listing in the abstract for tables specifying 4-digit detail.
Find data on Minneapolis.	Look in the subject index under "Minneapolis, Minn." Look also in the category index under "By city."
Be confident that you have found the latest data available.	Look at the dates in the notations of content that interest you in the ASI 1977 Annual Supplement. Check ASI 1978 Monthly Supplements under the same index terms to see if there are similar notations with later dates. ASI is current to 6-10 weeks after publication of the reports covered. If the notations of content indicate a periodical, locate the latest issue in the "Periodicals Received and Reviewed" section.
Find the latest issue of a periodical carrying forward a statistical time series.	Look in ASI 1977 Annual Supplement for description of the periodical. Look for the title in the "Periodicals Received and Reviewed" section of the latest ASI Monthly Supplements: the issues received each month will be listed.
Locate continuing monthly or quarterly reports on a particular subject.	Look in the subject index. The notations of content include the periodicity of the reports.
Determine the availability of comparable historical data.	Look in the Abstracts Section of each ASI edition, under the same accession number. The abstract will state whether the report is part of a continuing time series; e.g., "Twentieth annual report." Also, look in the abstract for references to earlier publications, changes in ASI accession numbers, or breaks in continuity.
Locate the report of a specific Board or Commission.	Look in the subject index under the name of the issuing agency.
Locate an agency publication list.	Look in the subject index under "Bibliographies."
Review the entire statistical output of any particular Federal Government agency or office.	Look in the detailed table of contents for the ASI accession number and page of the agency that interests you. Look in the Abstracts Section for all publications under this accession number.
Find out how many Federal Government agencies publish data on the same subject.	Look in the subject index, at the ASI accession numbers following the notations of content. The first two to four digits (minus the digit before the hyphen) indicate the issuing agency of the publication.
Locate a specific statistical article in a periodical.	Look in the title index or in the subject index under the author's name.
Determine the content of a specific publication when you know the title or agency report number.	Use the title index or the agency report number index to locate the pertinent abstract.
Locate all the reports in a specific series.	Look in the title index of each edition of ASI under the title of the series. If it is a numbered series, use the agency report number index.
Find a report you remember hearing about a few years back.	Start out by checking the ASI Retrospective Edition indexes, followed by successive Annual Supplements.
Locate reports describing specific statistical methods; locate reports containing projected data.	Look in the subject index under "Methodology;" look in the subject index under "Projections."

If this method does not prove fruitful or one desires a fuller survey of possible data on the subject, one should look at the related "see also" terms listed under the relevant subject terms or the broader more general terms that include the desired topic. This should provide the user with additional leads. An example of the use of broader terms is the following: while there is a great deal of material dealing exclusively with the printing industry indexed under the subject heading "Printing and Publishing industry," considerable additional material of potential value may be found under the more general subject heading, "Manufacturing."

One is not limited to searching by subject headings, author, or title in ASI. ASI has included an "Index by Categories" to provide ease of access to the statistical publications of a general nature which contain detailed breakdowns of information according to standard categories. The index of categories is designed to provide for the many instances where statistical data have been broken down by standard statistical categories such as by industry, by state, by sex, by race, etc. Due to this breakdown, data in the specified categories can be identified with greater detail than in the "Index of Subjects and Names." This index also provides the user with the best source for locating comparative data on a subject. For example, while much data on Texas can be located in the "Subject Index" under that term, much additional data will be found on those tables which contain breakdowns by state; these tables will be located through the "Index by Categories," under the breakdown heading "By State." Much valuable data on "Women" can be found by looking in this index under the breakdown heading, "By Sex."

The "Index by Categories" includes references to all publications, tables and groups of tables that include breakdowns of statistical data in twenty-one standard categories. These categories have been divided into three broad groups according to 1) geographic breakdowns, 2) economic breakdowns, and 3) demographic breakdowns. If one has further questions about ASI, please ask a reference librarian or read the user guide in the beginning of the Index volume.

RETRIEVING THE DOCUMENT

After having read through the abstracts and found one or more that meets one's needs, the user notes whether it has a bullet (•) or not. If it does not contain a bullet, it means that the item in question is not a government depository item. Entries in the index which are not marked with a bullet are on ASI Microfiche available in the Jones Microtext Center. Dartmouth has a complete set of non-depository ASI publications on microfiche; one notes the accession number of the abstract along with the year of the ASI volume in which he is looking: 18204-9 1977. Armed with these two figures, the user then proceeds to the Jones Microtext Center. The assistant in the Microtext Center needs the index year and the ASI number listed in the index to retrieve the document. The ASI microfiche collection begins in 1974, although it contains some pre-1974 documents.

If the item has a bullet, it is a government depository item and will be available in paper. The Library does not subscribe to the depository items on microfiche. If the publication is a serial, that is, published more than once in a continuous fashion, such as an annual, monthly or quarterly or numbered report, one must use the Catalog of Serials to look up the document by its corporate author (for example, U.S. Department of Interior, etc.) or by title, Survey of Current Business.

For a non-serial publication, published in 1978 or later, one must jot down the Superintendent of Documents number. Using that number, the patron should then proceed to the government documents mezzanine where the documents are arranged by SuDocs number. If the item were published before 1978, the patron must look it up either by the author or title in the main card catalog of Baker, since most pre-1978 government documents were placed in the stacks.

U.S. MONTHLY CATALOG

The Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications attempts to list all the documents that are published by the United States government. It is published monthly with semi-annual and annual cumulations. The user is provided ease of access to the materials through author, title, subject, and serias/report indexes.

When one has found a particular document in the index, he or she notes down the number that follows the item (its entry number). The user than proceeds to look that number up in the body of the catalog in order to find a description of the document. If the document looks appealing, the user notes down its Superintendent of Documents classification number. If it is 1978 or later, the user then proceeds up to the government documents mezzanine where it will be located. If it is listed as being in microfiche format, it will be found in the Jones Microtext Center using the SuDocs number. However, if it was published before 1978, the user must note down its author and title in order to look it up in the main card catalog of Baker. If it is a serial, which means it is published more than once in a continuous fashion, the patron must look it up on the Catalog of Serials under its corporate author (for example, the United States Department of Agriculture) or its title.

Baker Library contains issues of the Monthly Catalog from 1909 to the present. There are also Cumulated Personal Author Indexes for the years 1941-1950, 1951-1960, 1961-1965, and 1966-1970. Our holdings also include a multi-volume Cumulative Subject Index to the Monthly Catalog from 1900-1971. These cumulated indexes are shelved alongside the Monthly Catalog, which is located on the north wall of the Serials Reading Room.

THE DECLASSIFIED DOCUMENTS REFERENCE SYSTEM

A collection of top-secret, secret, and confidential federal documents which have been declassified under the provisions of Executive Order 11,652 and the Freedom of Information Act are available on microfiche in the Jones Microtext Center. These documents, mainly post-World War II in origin, have been secured from a number of departments and agencies including State, Defense, CIA, and the White House.

The Retrospective Collection consists of three hardcover volumes published in 1975. Part 1 is a two-volume Catalog of Abstracts while the second part is a one-volume Cumulative Subject Index. To update this core collection, Abstract Catalogs are published quarterly, accompanied by a separate cumulative Subject Index. The microfiche contains the full text of all documents indexed in the hardbound volumes and quarterly issues. It is arranged in the same sequence as the entries in the catalog.

The documents in the collection range in size and scope from telegrams, correspondence, and unevaluated field reports to lengthy background studies, detailed minutes of cabinet level meetings and complete National Intelligence Estimates.

In addition to the subject index, since the entries in the abstracts are arranged alphabetically by the names of government agencies in which the documents originated, while the abstracts are arranged by subject within each department or agency, one can browse through the abstracts by subject matter within each department.

An example of how to use this collection is

GOVERNMENT REPORTS ANNOUNCEMENTS & INDEX
NATIONAL TECHNICAL INFORMATION SERVICE

The National Technical Information Service (NTIS) of the U.S. Department of Commerce is the central source for the public sale of government-sponsored research, engineering and development reports and other analyses prepared by Special Technology Groups, Federal Agencies or their grantees and contractors. The Dartmouth Library System has scattered holdings of these publications; the majority of which are available uncataloged in the Feldberg Library.

NTIS publishes Government Reports Announcements and Index (GRA & I), a semi-monthly indexing and abstracting service for comprehensive bibliographic coverage. The report entries are arranged by subject in 22 Subject Field and Group Structure Categories. The categories cover primarily technical and scientific fields except for Field 5, "Behavioral and Social Sciences," which includes subdivisions such as history, humanities, psychology, law and personnel selection. GRA & I is the basic bibliographic tool for summaries of government research.

In order to gain access to the reports, one can use the subject, personal author, corporate author, contract grant number, and accession/report number indexes.

At the end of each index entry in the lower right hand corner is its point of access to the subject group which contains the abstract of the report. Within each subject section, the report entries are arranged alphanumerically by NTIS order number (accession number).

The following are examples of sample main entries as well as index entries.
